Cowboys have lived and worked in the west and south - west of the United States for over three centuries and they are a famous symbol of the USA. When you watch those old Holly - wood cowboy films from the fifties and sixties, you don't see a job. You see a

(36) life of freedom and adventure (冒险) . However, the real job of an American cowboy has always been (37) hard and sometimes dangerous. It is physical with long hours and low pay.

Life hasn't (38) changed much for cowboys since the early days. Cows walk across huge plains (草原) to (39) take the grass and the cowboy rides on his horse to bring (40) them home. Like the cowboys of the past, a 21st century cowboy (41) still gets up early on freezing cold mornings and makes breakfast over a fire .

So why does a man - because it is usually a man - become a cowboy ? For some, it isn't a (42) choice , because they are born into the life. They have worked with (43) cows since they were children. They (44) love the traditional cowboy culture : "It's a real life about you, your horse and the open (45) country . "

Some people choose the job (46) later in life. Pat had an office job with the US government with high pay, (47) but he didn't like city life and spending all day inside. So one day, he (48) gave up his job and moved to a ranch (牧场) in Texas, making much less money (49) as a cowboy. He wanted job satisfaction.

And for a cowboy, job satisfaction doesn't come from the money or a comfortable office. It comes from being (50) free to wake up under the sky and being your own boss .

Chile (智利) is a long and beautiful country with ocean to the west and mountains to the east. Some of the villages are a very long way from (51) cities and some of the schools are very small.

It is difficult for small schools to teach science (52) because they don't have enough teachers or equipment (设备) . This is where the Science Bus Project can help. The bus (53) brings special science teachers, new ideas and equipment to schools in different parts of the country. Sometimes the children go inside the bus for (54) their science lessons or clubs. Sometimes the teachers (55) even bring the equipment inside the classroom. The children do experiments (实验) . The materials used in the experiments are (56) easy to find, for example recycled plastic bottles, so that the class teacher can (57) repeat the experiments with the class when the bus has gone .

The (58) goal of the Science Bus Project is to bring science to children all over Chile. Since 2012, the bus has visited lots of schools in Chile, and hundreds of teachers have learned how (59) to make their science classes fun and exciting.

Science is (60) important for all of us, as it helps us understand our world and we can learn about it inside or outside of the classroom .

In 2007, Barrington Irving became the youngest person to fly alone around the world. He was just 23 years old – and he built the plane himself. How did he achieve this ?

Irving's interest in flying started when he was 15. He was working in his parents' bookstore in Miami, Florida. One of the customers was a pilot, Gary Robinson. One day, Robinson asked Irving if he was interested in flying. Irving didn't think he was smart enough. But the next day, Robinson took Irving to an airport. He showed Irving inside the cockpit (驾驶舱) of a Boeing 777. That experience changed Irving's life .

Irving really wanted to fly, but flight school was expensive. To achieve his dream, he worked different jobs. He washed airplanes and cleaned swimming pools. At home, he practiced flying on a video game. In the end, he got enough money for flight school.

At flight school, Irving achieved his dream of learning how to fly. But he wasn't finished. Next, he planned to build his own plane and fly alone around the world.

Building the plane was difficult. Irving asked more than 50 companies for airplane parts. Most said no, but he persisted (顽强地坚持) in asking. Three years later, he had parts worth $ 300, 000. Columbia, an airplane company, agreed to build a plane using the parts. Soon, his airplane was ready to fly .

On March 23, 2007, Irving began his round – the – world trip. After 97 days – with 145 hours in the air – he landed back in Miami. A cheering crowd of people was there to welcome him .

Irving saw many young people in the crowd, and this had a powerful effect (影响) on him. He wanted to use his experience to help other young people achieve their own dreams .

"Everyone told me what I couldn't do, "says Irving. "They said I was too young, that I didn't have enough money. But even if no one believes in your dream, "he says, "you have to pursue (追求) it. "

Some people take risks simply because it makes them feel good. Psychologist (心理学家) Marvin says that this kind of explorers (探险者) are always looking for change and excitement. When people do something new or risky, a chemical (化学物质) in the brain creates a pleasant feeling. They love this feeling and want to experience it as often as possible.

Other people don't take risks for the feeling of excitement but to achieve a goal. For example, Mike Fay went on a dangerous 2, 000 - mile special journey in central Africa. He worked to help save the wildlife there. Fay's expeditions helped create 13 national parks.

For other people, such as extreme athletes (极限运动员), taking risks is part of their job. Sports psychologist Shane says extreme athletes see the world differently. In a dangerous activity, most people probably do not feel in control. Extreme athletes are different : they feel in control in dangerous situations. The danger can even help them. For example, skier Daron Rahlves says that being afraid makes him try harder to succeed.

Most of us are not extreme athletes or explorers. However, we still take risks in our lives. Some of us take social risks, such as speaking in front of a large group of people. Sometimes, we take financial risks, such as buying a house. And sometimes we take career risks, such as leaving a job or starting a business. Most people take risks in some areas of life, but not in others. What kind of risk - taker are you ?

How do you feel about nature ? After spending hours indoors, do you feel better when you visit your local park ? Most people think that nature is good for our bodies and brains. However, humans are spending more time inside and less time outside. For example, the number of visitors to Canada's national parks is getting lower every year. And in countries such as the USA, only 10% of teenagers spend time outside every day. Many doctors feel that this is a problem in the twenty - first century .

As a result, some doctors are studying the connection between nature and health : one example of this is the work of Dr Matilda in Sweden. The doctor gave people a math test. During the test, their heart rates (心率) were fast. After the test, one group of people sat in a 3D - virtual - reality (虚拟现实) room for fifteen minutes with pictures and sounds of nature. Their heart rates were slower than people's in the other group .

The virtual touch with nature helped them feel more relaxed. Another good example of how nature is good for health comes from Canada. In Toronto, researchers studied 31, 000 people living in the city. In general, they found that healthier people lived near parks.

Because of studies like these, some countries and cities want nature to be part of people's everyday life. In Dubai (迪拜), for example, there are plans for a new shopping mall with a large garden so shoppers can relax outside with trees, plants and water. In Switzerland, "forest schools" are popular. Schoolchildren study their subjects in the forests and do lots of exercise outside. And South Korea (韩国) is another good example : it has new forests near its cities and around 13 million people visit these forests every year. So after building cities for so long, perhaps it's now time to start rebuilding nature .

(72) What does Paragraph 1 mainly talk about ?

- A. Teenagers' problem in the 21st century. B. How much time we spend outdoors .
C. Visiting your local park . D. Feeling about nature .

(73) Match the countries or cities with the information and choose the right answer .

② Dubai b. About 13 million people visit new forests near its cities every year .
③ Switzerland c . A new shopping mall with a large garden will be built .
④ South Korea d.10% of teenagers spend time outside every day .

A . ① - a ② - d ③ - b ④ - c

B . ① - d ② - c ③ - a ④ - b

C . ① - a ② - c ③ - d ④ - b

D . ① - d ② - c ③ - b ④ - a

(74) What do the results of the studies show ?

- A. More and more Canadians will live near parks .
B. The math test is difficult and makes people nervous .
C. Nature can help people feel more relaxed and be healthier .

D. People's heart rates get slower in a 3D - virtual - reality room.

(75) What can we infer from the last sentence of the passage ?

A. Nature is more important than cities .

B. Country life is healthier than city life .

C. People have lived in the cities for so long .

D. Nature should be part of people's daily life .

I think my English revision classes were boring because we repeat the same knowledge over and over again. Gradually, we seem to lose interest in learning.

In class, our English teacher always tell us the importance of review. She repeats it almost every class. This makes us feel very annoyed. Because we already feel a lot of pressure, her words will make us feel more pressure. I usually listen to the teacher carefully. I kept taking notes so that I wouldn't miss anything important. I hope my English teacher will try to say something to make us relaxed in class. Although she wants to make us better, it's also important to reduce our stress.
